MEDICINAL.
One of a healthy woman's principal charms is her vivacity of carriage, the dainty springy steps with which she walks. The woman who suffers from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism, who is troubled with back aches, stitches in the sides, dragging down or burning sensations, sick headaches, and the multitude of other ills that accompany these disorders, cannot have too much of the dainty carriage of a healthy woman. She will show in every movement that she is a sufferer.

There is a wonderful medicine for trouble of this kind, which has stood the test of many years, and has been used successfully by many thousands of women. It is Dr. J. C. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Plaster. It is a delicate and important remedy, and makes them strong, healthy, and vigorous. It allays inflammation, soothes pain, and it gives the blood a healthy tone. It is the greatest medical institution in the world. During the thirty years that Dr. Ayer has been at the head of this institution, he has never failed to give the remainder of his life to the practice of his chosen profession. He will cheerfully answer, free of charge, any letters written to him by suffering women. Address, as above.

Dr. J. C. Ayer writes Mr. W. R. Bates, of the National College, Ohio: "I took your Cherry Pectoral Plaster, which has been a great help to me. I am in excellent health, and I hope that every woman, who is troubled with any of the ills that I have mentioned, will be benefited as I have been."

BULL TREES WOMEN.
Mrs. Frank Dodge and Miss Ethel Fairchild, who are spending the summer at Pelham Manor, near Mount Vernon, N. Y., after running through the woods for nearly a mile only escaped being gored to death by a big Holstein bull by climbing into a low cedar tree, which grew near a barbed wire fence, through which they were unable to make their way.

Mrs. Dodge is the wife of the scenic artist of the Herald Square Theatre, New York City. Miss Fairchild has been their guest for the last two weeks. She and Mrs. Dodge, as was their custom every day, accompanied Mr. Dodge to the train at the Pelham station Monday morning. Miss Fairchild suggested that they return home through the wood known as Winah Park, owned by Col. Richard Lathers. In one corner of this wood is a small clearing, which had been leased by Col. Lathers to Patrick Walsh, a farmer. In his clearing the vicious bull was tethered to a tree by a fifty foot chain, one end of which was attached to a ring in the bull's nose.

When Miss Fairchild and Mrs. Dodge were in the centre of the wood, within sight of the pasture, Miss Fairchild said, with a little scream:—
"Oh, look at Walsh's bull! I believe he's loose!"

As they turned to jump over a fallen tree, the animal, maddened by the heat and flies, caught sight of a red ribbon on Miss Fairchild's hat and started toward the women. The clanking of the broken chain, mingled with the bellowing of the animal, which, with head down and tail up, was coming toward the two women at a trot, made them shake with terror. Miss Fairchild was the first to recover herself.

"Come!" said she, gathering up her skirts. "Let's run toward the fence. Maybe the bull will get tangled in his chain."

The two women scampered through the underbrush, the bull in close pursuit. The animal was within twenty feet of the fleeing women when, as Miss Fairchild hoped, the chain caught in a sapling for a moment and gave them a chance to gain a hundred feet on the maddened bull.

Then the animal, loosening the chain, again started in pursuit. The women were through the bushes now, and the bull was gaining on the women at every jump. One hundred feet away was a barbed wire fence, eight feet high. Around them were trees, which they could not climb. It looked as if there was no escape from the animal.

The women were nearly faint from terror and loss of breath when Miss Fairchild spied a small cedar tree, which was used as a post in the barbed wire fence. The tree's branches hung low to the ground. The two women, their tattered skirts impeding their progress, headed for the cedar. Just as they had climbed to the second branch of the little tree the bull reached the fence and stood pawing the earth. The women were too much exhausted and frightened for a moment to scream for help. In a few minutes Mrs. Dodge climbed out on a limb reaching over the side of the fence opposite the bull in the rear of Mr. Lawrence's barn.

From here she dropped to the ground into a heap of tin cans and rubbish, which cut her about the face and hands. She was stunned for a few moments, and Miss Fairchild, who thought she had fainted, called loudly for help. Mr. Lawrence heard the cries, and, hurrying to the rear of the barn, rescued the young women from their predicament, driving the bull away from the fence at the point of a pitchfork. The women were then taken to the farm house, where, under the care of Mr. Lawrence and his wife, they recovered from their fright and exhaustion.

The bull, after being captured, was taken to Walsh's barnyard, and soon will be turned into dressed beef.

Robbed the Grave.
A startling incident of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents per bottle, at E. S. Leadbeater & Sons' Drug Store.

You invite disappointment when you expectant. DeWitt's Little Early Bitters are pleasant, easy, thorough little pills. They cure constipation and sick headache just as sure as you take them. C. G. Lennon.
